

Language Development

Children develop their understanding of language and ability to talk as they grow. Below is a brief guide on what to expect as your child learns to communicate.

I am 6 to 12 months

I am babbling (e.g. "mama", "bubu").

I am learning to copy actions like waving and clapping.

I know two body parts.

I might say my first word around 12 months.

I am 12 to 18 months

I will say my first words.

I will imitate sounds.

I know three or more body parts.

I enjoy simple songs.

I take some turns in simple games.

I am 18 to 24 months

At 18 months I can say about 50 words.

I will start to combine words (e.g. "bye daddy", "more drink").

I enjoy simple songs.

I understand simple questions (e.g. "Where's the dog?").

I can answer simple questions (e.g. "What's that?").

I am 2 to 3 years

At 24 months I will say about 200 - 300 words.

I will go from using little sentences of two words to longer sentences of 5+ words.

I will understand and say simple location words (e.g. in, on, under, up and down).

I will start using words like "I", "me", "you", "he", "she", "big", "little" and "same".

I can find simple pictures in books and know my body parts.

I can follow instructions with two parts.

I can understand and answer questions (e.g. 'what is the boy doing?').

I am 3 to 4 years

At 36 months I will say about 900 - 1000 words.

I will talk in sentences and tell simple stories.

I will understand and say colour words and simple shapes.

I will start using words like "a" and "the" and will make longer sentences with words such as "and" and "because".

I will use regular past tense verbs (e.g. climbed).

I will understand simple questions containing "who", "what", "where", "when" and "why".

I can listen carefully and understand 3 or more key words in a sentence (e.g. The tall boy is throwing an apple).

I am 4 to 5 years

I am talking in sentences.

I am able to tell stories with a beginning, middle and end.

I can listen to simple stories and answer 'wh' questions about them.

I can answer 'when', 'how' and 'how many?' questions.

I can say words such as 'myself' and 'himself'.

I can follow two to three part instructions.

I can understand and say later concepts like 'in front', 'behind', 'before' and 'after'.
